

BUYING SIGNAL · 29 SEP 2026

Stepford Contracts is hiring someone to build what you build.

On 29 September 2026 they posted an AI & Automation Lead to work directly with the Director. They want someone who builds, not someone who advises.

WHY NOW

Four reasons we think Stepford Contracts is looking right now.

29 Sep 2026	£65k to £85k	The Director	Open
Role advertised	Salary on offer	Who it reports to	Nobody named yet

On 29 September 2026 they posted an AI & Automation Lead to work directly with the Director.

The person hired will sit with Conor Brady, the Director, to find manual, repetitive and administrative processes and build AI agents and automated workflows that reduce manual intervention.

The advert says they already use AI in parts of the business and want more automation.

Stepford has named further automation opportunities in writing, and the open role is the route it has chosen to act on them.

They want someone who builds, not someone who advises.

Stepford has ruled out a strategy-only engagement in the advert itself and named building AI agents and automated workflows as the work.

The role is still open and the work has not been handed to anyone yet.

Conor Brady, the Director, is the one the open role reports to, and the build work named in the advert has no owner inside Stepford yet.

YOUR OPENING MOVE

A first email you could send today

From Harvey Pitt To Conor Brady Subject Groundworks Automation Build

Hi Conor,

Saw Stepford Contracts opened an AI & Automation Lead role on 29 Sep 2026, reporting directly to you.

The advert is clear: "We are looking for someone who can build," not advise or write a strategy.

It also says you already use AI in parts of the business and have identified further automation opportunities.

That is the work we do at Alive Industries: custom generative AI solutions and multi-agent workflow automation for small and medium businesses, and we could start on it before the role is filled.

Can I send you a one page plan for the first workflow on your list? (this is complimentary)

Harvey

WHAT TO WATCH FOR NEXT

The buying intent signals we would track for you.

Deployment

integrates with what they run

- ● A firm advertises connecting AI to existing business applications using APIs and webhooks
  Alive Industries builds integrations into current tools, so the connection objection is already answered.
- ● A small business names workflow automation platforms in a job advert
  Alive Industries builds multi-agent workflow automation that sits alongside those platforms.
- ○ A company runs intelligent document processing on its own documents
  Alive Industries automates document processing and classification for clients.

Hiring

someone new owns the build

- ● A company posts a role to build AI agents and automated workflows
  Alive Industries supplies dedicated AI experts who build those agents.
- ● A director hires an AI lead to work directly with them
  Alive Industries works with founders and directors on tailored AI solutions.
- ○ A firm hires a full in-house team of AI engineers to replace outside builders
  Alive Industries extends a build rather than replacing an internal team.

Event

said in public

- ● A company states in writing it already uses AI and wants more automation
  Alive Industries takes that stated intent and builds the next automated workflow.
- ● A firm says it wants builders rather than AI strategy advisers Alive Industries delivers built AI solutions, not strategy decks.
- ○ A business publicly books a generative AI workshop before any build Alive Industries runs generative AI workshops as a first step.
